

BETH JORDAN ON VALUES-DRIVEN GOVERNANCE

Beth Jordan (she/her), co-CEO of There Management Consulting Inc. and self-identified "governance nerd," talks about reimagining governance so that it is more values-aligned.

"Legislation is still there. But that does not mean that we cannot reimagine, that you can't recontextualize, that we can't really shift the way we do governance inside of an organization."

Beth notes that although legislation and fiduciary duties are a reality, there is still lots of room to reimagine. The opportunities, she says, are boundless.

There's really a lot to unpack here in terms of liberation and equity, representation, access, and opportunity - and at the center, those most impacted by the work of the organization should have real power to flex within governance.
